BREEDING BUREAU IS IMPEERIAL NECESSITY

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Some years ago when The Thoroughbred Record had a contest to determine the most suitable mate for the grand mare Beldamein the breeding paddock, California's position in the thoroughbred world was recognized by the selection of the late William O'Brien Macdonough and the late John Mackey to serve with other noted sportsmen on the international committee to make the award.

California stood high in that period—the early years of this century—in the breeding of the blood horse and on casting a backward glance the thought often comes as to the return of such times. Macdonough was the owner of the undefeated Ormonde, which stood at his nursery in this county, and Mackey, a renowned authority on blood lines, was manager of Ranch del Paso, near Sacramento. Produce of both haras was offered at auction in New York and sometimes even as far away as London.

A suggestion came to me the other day about the slow pace in building up the breeding industry once more in this state that appears to have merit. It is along the line that though the broodmare is as important, or perhaps even more important, than the stallion, still we must have the stallions in order to achieve worth while results. There are only comparatively few stallions in California at present.

The days of big fortunes which made possible an estate of 40,000 acres devoted to the breeding of the race horse are gone forever. At one time James B. Haggin had no less than 26 sires and 545 matrons at his Rancho del Paso, he did not have a "corner" on the best blood in the world but he had quite a quantity of the best.

Economic changes now rapidly taking place make it a wise policy to have apportioned from the millions of dollars going to the state treasury from taxation of the tracks a sum sufficient to establish a state breeding bureau. One of the chief moves of the bureau would be the purchase of young stallions of approved blood lines. Then a farmer with a mare or two would have an opportunity of rearing a colt at nominal cost.

The efforts of the Roosevelt administration in the rehabilitation of the country have demonstrated conclusively that when private industry fails the people (through their representatives) can accomplish wonders. What goes for other lines also goes for horse breeding.

TWO PEDESTRIANS RUN DOWN WHILE SPEEDING FOR CAR

Fail To See Approaching
Vehicle In Time To Avoid
Collision And Injuries

A Sunday afternoon ride down the peninsula ended in a collision with two pedestrians for Mr. and Mrs. John J. Murphy of 165 Duncan street, San Francisco.

Murphy, 46, was at the wheel of the car. The injured pedestrians are William Harkins, 40, 1686 San Jose avenue, and Donald Poirier, 26, 44 Fifth street, both of San Francisco. They collided with Murphy's car as they ran directly in its path to board a Market street railway car at Como street, about 8:55 o'clock.

The injured men were removed to the Villa Hospital for treatment.

The driver of the automobile was cited to appear in the local police court Monday of this week at 2 p. m. The case was continued until May 5, pending outcome of the victims' injuries.

Murphy asserted he did not see either of the men until they were lying on the pavement after his car struck them.

EXTENDED AUTO TOUR FOR COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hauptli of 87 San Pedro avenue, left, early Wednesday morning, on an extended automobile tour. Their ultimate destination will be Detroit, Mich., but they plan to make many visits and side trips during the journey.

They have a large circle of friends and relatives in and around Detroit, many of whom they have not seen for years. After visiting these old friends, it is their intention to return by easy stages, arriving at their home in Daly City some time during the latter part of June.

The Three "Yes Men" Say People Shall Not Rule

In the recent city election for councilmen the man who "master minded" himself out of the picture made an attempt to ride into office two men through the medium of letters and circulars issued over the signature of that notorious character (Colonel? Berger) who recently, in conjunction with our now departed "mayor" and his three "yes men" on the council, used every method, devious and otherwise, to saddle on this community the cheap, dirty, penny ante "racket" known as "Bingo."

Even this brazen move failed, and the two intended mouthpieces were soundly trounced at the polls.

Seventeen hundred and seventy of our Daly City electors, on April 10, voted to have a new deal in the governmental policy of this community.

On Monday evening of this week, the three "rubber stamps" for the retiring "ruler," who are still sitting on the City Council by virtue of the fact that their terms of office have not yet expired, voted to promulgate the old regime and continue the policies of arrogant misrule it was hoped to end by the departure from the board of the ringleader.

Men of this caliber are not proper officials to conduct the business of our city. A clean sweep is imperative.

The citizens of Daly City have again been taken into camp by the political dictatorship which has ruled this community for many years.

It had been hoped that, having decidedly expressed, by their ballots at the election of last Tuesday, their desire for a clean and decent government, the will of the people would be heeded in the organization of the City Council of Daly City on Monday evening of this week.

However, the hope proved groundless.

As soon as the announcement was made by the clerk, who called the new council to order, that nominations were in order for chairman of the board (designated by courtesy "mayor") up popped (that's the only way to describe the action) Councilman Twesten, one of the "heroes" of Bingo fame, and in a strident voice trembling with emotion nominated that other "hero" of the same "shady" fame, Paul Selmi (the man who as a councilman introduced the infamous Bingo ordinance). This nomination was promptly seconded by the third member of this nefarious Bingo cult—Councilman Sundermann.

One of the new councilmen nominated his colleague, Mr. J. J. Fahey, who at the recent election was accorded the honor of receiving the highest number of votes ever cast for any candidate for councilman in Daly City. Mr. Fahey, as a member of the old council, was the only man who refused to be brow beaten or coerced by the "master mind" then dominating the council and dictating its actions with the support of his three "yes men"—Selmi, Sundermann and Twesten.

However, the last named three councilmen preferred to ignore the voice of the electors of the city, so decidedly expressed in the recent election, and all voted to seat their fellow "rubber stamp" as presiding officer.

The crowning act of impudence of this affair came when this individual had the brazen audacity to fly in the face of all decent precedent and vote for himself for the position.

By this exhibition the remaining three "strap hangers" holding over from the old council served notice that they still intended to serve their "master," although he is no longer a member of the council or an official of Daly City.

We believe such a display of disloyalty to our citizens and such wilful disregard for their expressed wishes should be met with a strong rebuke.

We do not believe that the electors will stand idly by and see their rights further invaded by defiance on the part of our elected officials.

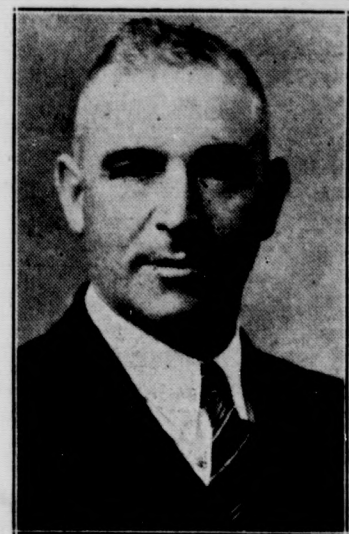

Already there are rumblings and threats of "recall" for the nefarious trio who have long been a part of the dictatorship which has overridden the will of the people and made necessary invoking of the referendum on two occasions in recent months.

It appears that the only way to rid ourselves of public servants who befool the official nest is to insist on their retirement to private life—and that at once!

Councilmen Selmi, Sundermann and Twesten have proven—not only by their actions on the old council, but in this latest "shady" transaction—that they are entirely unfit to serve the people of Daly City and untrustworthy to carry out the wishes of the electors.

E. T. Cavagnaro

The interest taken in the formal seating of John J. Fahey and Edmund Cavagnaro at the Council table was so widespread that the large attendance overtaxed the facilities in the Council chambers. As a result a new precedent was set. For the first time in the history of Daly City the council was forced to adjourn to the auditorium on the second floor in order to provide sufficient accommodation for the audience.

The final meeting of the old City Council was held Monday evening before an audience of over 300 residents of the community. The minutes of the previous adjourned meeting were first read and approved and as there was no other business of importance before the board, all other matters except the canvass of the absentee ballots were laid over to the next regular meeting.

The retiring mayor, in the interim before the canvass, did make a motion to appoint members to the Board of Review provided for in the much discussed Civil Service Ordinance, but this motion was defeated by a three to two vote.

Mayor Smith then called upon the members of the Council, the City Clerk and the City Treasurer to address the gathering.

Councilman Fahey thanked the people of Daly City for their unprecedented support of his candidacy, as never before in the history of Daly City had any candidate for the City Council received as large a majority as that accorded Mr. Cavagnaro and himself. He promised that he would always do his utmost to give to the people honest, progressive and impartial representation upon the board.

Councilman Sundermann, after congratulating the newly elected members of the City Council, promised that he would at all times co-operate with them and the entire board, expressing his desire that they all work together in harmony for the welfare of the community.

Councilman Twesten spoke of his long association with the old board and also of his wish to continue serving the people with the co-operation of the new members.

Mr. Stockton, when called touched on his many years of service as City Treasurer, recalled some of the numerous incidents during that time and thanked the voters for the confidence extended him on election day.

City Clerk Ross also spoke of his long service and the pleasure he had derived from it and his hope that his efforts would continue to meet with the approval of the people.

Mayor Smith then made a rather lengthy address, recalling his long years of service and effort and closed by thanking the people for their support and bade them as their retiring mayor an official farewell.

The old board then adjourned and the new City Council was convened by City Clerk Ross. After the new members were sworn in the meeting was thrown open for nominations for the post of chairman. Councilman Twisten nominated Mr. Selmi, which was seconded by Councilman Sundermann. Councilman Cavagnaro then nominated Mr. Fahey. The roll was called and Mr. Paul Selmi was chosen as the new mayor.

Mayor Selmi thanked the Council for the great honor they had given him. He stated that the overwhelming vote cast in favor of Fahey and Cavagnaro had convinced him that the people as a whole were strongly in favor of the platform and program these men had advocated, and that he would pledge himself to assist the other members of the City Council in their efforts to effect the improvements contained in that program.

Councilman Cavagnaro, when called on expressed his gratitude for the support given his candidacy and stated the hope that his actions as Councilman would continue to merit the approval of the people.

COMING TO THE LOCAL THEATER

When Michael William Balfe, poetic Irishman, wrote the popular opera, "The Bohemian Girl," nearly a century ago, little did he dream that it would one day be the basis of a comedy motion picture. The opus, as he conceived it, was a dramatic and sometimes morbid story concerning the adventures of a gypsy band, interspersed with ballads noted for their pathetic sentiment.

Now comes Laurel and Hardy, plenipotentiaries of fun, as stars of a new and hilarious version of the noted epic, a version dedicated to joy and laughter, but nevertheless "The Bohemian Girl." Their full length motion picture suggested by the Balfe opera begins a two days engagement at the Daly City Theater, Sunday and Monday, April 26 and 27, and judging by the current interest in this advent, the screen version holds a greater interest for entertainment seekers than did any of the stage productions of the same title.

On the same program, Bing Crosby in "Anything Goes."

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

Prehistoric Bones Found in Southern California

Bits of bone have furnished scientists with evidence that man may have roamed southern California in the glacial epoch—nearly 25,000 years ago. Prehistoric remains of an Imperial elephant, largest of all land mammals, and what appeared to be a human being were unearthed by WPA workers, digging 12 feet below the surface of the Slauson avenue drain, Los Angeles. In a closely assembled group were fragments of tusks, two teeth, and parts of a large vertebra. Near by were smaller bones, including a skull.

The Acme Of Insolence!

"Putting one over on the people" seems to be a mania with some officials.

Last Monday evening, as the crowning piece of insolence, the chairman of the board (now retired) attempted to foist on the people a hand picked Civil Service Board of Review. He had prepared a resolution purporting to appoint to this board—for six, four and two years—three of his political "boosters"—Johnson, Collins and Kost.

In the face of an action pending in the Superior Court, restraining the members of the City Council from taking any action toward putting into effect the provisions of the moot Civil Service Ordinance, such unmitigated "gall" is well nigh unbelievable.

Fortunately, he was able to muster the vote of only one of his "me too" adherents, Twesten, and the abortive effort died a-borning.

Common decency should have impelled the retiring official to leave office without trying to put on a last "shady" performance.

LIBERALS ARE LIKELY TO SWEEP COUNTRY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

On all fronts Roosevelt is gaining. The President acknowledged long ago a new social order is in the offing. His opponents have not even sensed that patent thing. They are enveloped by a mist of worn out theories of economy and apparently are fated to stay in that miasmic atmosphere to the last.

An especially enlightening address by the Rev. Jacob Trapp of Salt Lake City the other day in San Francisco shows the way thought is tending. Ministers are proverbially conservative, but liberalism is in the very air these days and the men of the cloth cannot escape being affected by the spirit of the times.

Rev. Trapp spoke at a conference of the Free Church Fellowship. He defined liberalism the way President Roosevelt has interpreted it—freedom of speech, thought and inquiry, to put the thing somewhat terse. He sounded an alarm against Facism, an imminent danger, as every thinking person knows, to our free institutions.

In part he said: "Facism is the last ditch defense of capital that squeezes out the middle class and reduces even lower the standards of living of poor people, cuts out labor unions and eliminates human rights in religion and speech and action."

The minister disagrees with Sinclair Lewis, whose most recent novel, "It Can't Happen Here," selling by the hundreds of thousands, has as its thesis the impossibility of Americans standing for such a Fascist dictatorship as obtains in some parts of the world.

In concluding he said:

"Our people must be educated to realize that it can happen here, and in this it is the responsibility of the church to take the initiative, to combat the forces drawing us toward a dictatorship regime."

It is noteworthy that the speaker provoked much enthusiasm when he showed his hearty approval of such movements as that of the Roosevelt administration in saying we must organize our natural resources, agricultural and mining, to put men to work producing the abundance possible in this richest of all nations.

Still more Rooseveltian influence on thought is seen in the book, "$2500 A Year," by Mordecai Ezekiel. The author's goal, to be reached within a few years, is a minimum family income of $2500 a year.

At the basis of all our financial troubles, as President Roosevelt has often pointed out, is the malfunctioning of the profit system. To bring the system back to proper working order Ezekiel would have adopted an industrial adjustment program that is a blend of the AAA and the NRA.

Under the Ezekiel scheme producers would be induced by the offer of cash benefit payments to enter into contracts with the federal government to increase output, to employ more labor, and in many cases to pay higher wages while charging lower prices. The money for benefit payments would be obtained from production taxes.

In order to achieve anything in the way of a new social order there must be an appreciable development of what may be termed civic consciousness. Under the New Deal an individual maintains his independent individualistic activities, but at the same time does not do the least thing to interfere with the activities of his neighbor.

A number of economists find the key to our present difficulties in a tendency toward oversavings, which becomes worse by an uneven distribution of wealth in the community. The liberal school points out investments necessary to revive employment are dependent on consumption rather than on savings. President Roosevelt's proposed tax on undistributed corporate profits is a step in solving the hard problem.

The hurdle to get over is the vast aggregation of wealth in a few hands. Against all liberal forces is aligned the counter force exercised by monopolies and trusts, which utilize governmental power to strengthen their anti-social policies.

For the first time in the state's history, the Democratic party registration is half a million ahead of the nearest competing party. And the leader of the Democratic host, of course, is none other than that clear-sighted apostle of the new social order, Franklin Roosevelt.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." These words from I Peter comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, April 26, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson Sermon will be "Probation after Death." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? . . . If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept" (I Cor. 15: 12, 19-20).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Jesus' unchanged physical condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions; and this exaltation explained his ascension, and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive state beyond the grave" (p. 46).

Tanforans At Santa Cruz Sunday In State League

Volkman's Team Is Favored Over Fourth Place Padre Nine

Traveling to Santa Cruz with a strong chance to move themselves up in the column, the Daly City Tanforans engage the Santa Cruz Padres Sunday afternoon at the mountain city.

The Tanfos have proved themselves to be the hardest hitting team in the State League circuit but will be given tough opposition by the Padres, who boast a fair hurler in Joe Olsen, and a well-balanced team.

Having switched his batting line up, Manager Ray Volkman thinks he has struck a winning combination, and will start off the same as he did last week against Orinda. Bill Sturtevant, who is getting better results with each game, will probably draw the pitcher's assignment with Volkman behind the plate.

Another item in favor of the locals is the return of second-baseman Mickey Hannan to the line up. Hannan has been laid up with a sore back for two weeks, but should be back in form for Sunday's contest. However, he will have to be at his best to beat out Killilea, who garnered two safe hits while holding down the keystone sack against Orinda.

The spectacular hitting strength of Petrocchi and Burke will be valuable to the Tanfos and third-sacker Palmieri, who has been in a slump, should find his eye at Santa Cruz.

TANFORAN JR'S. NEW BALL CLUB

Plansky, Smith and Keagle To Play For White

The Daly City A. C., long active in Sunday baseball bookings, is no more.

Manager Eddie White's tossers played their last game under the old colors Sunday when they defeated the Maroons on the Jefferson diamond. Planning to secure the services of several new players, White has re-organized his team under the name of the Tanforan Juniors, and will enter a class A or double A league, he said.

Among those expected to perform for the Juniors are Tom Long at first, Dave Johnston at shortstop, and several other former high school stars. Mo Plansky, former U. S. F. star, is planning a comeback at second base, as is Hughie Smith, center-fielder.

Gene Keagle, right handed ace who hasn't pitched for a couple of years, has been warming up recently with a view to taking over the mound duties for the new aggregation.

Bill Strassburger and George Ragghianti of the high school nine may join the outfit at the conclusion of the prep baseball season.

PETROCCHI GETS TWO HOME RUNS

Everybody Hits As Locals Trounce Orinda, 16-1

A home run with the bases loaded by Lola Petrocchi started the Daly City Tanforan nine off on a wild rampage that resulted in a lop-sided 16 to 1 victory over the Orinda Reds, Sunday, at the San Mateo City diamond.

The funny part of it is that the Orinda players are rookies optioned by the Cincinnati Reds. Petrocchi tried out with them this spring, but was released as undesirable. Now he's too good for them. Petrocchi hit two homers and a single on Sunday.

Scoring seven runs in the first inning, the Tanfos had things all their own way, with Bill Sturtevant allowing the Reds only six hits.

A bit of strategy by Manager Ray Volkman is responsible for the barrage. Johnny Burke, first baseman, hadn't been hitting the ball in recent contests, so Volkman shifted him to the lead-off position at the bat, where Burke showed his gratitude by knocking out four hits. Killilea, taking Mickey Hannan's place at second, also came through with two hits, while Hannan sat on the sidelines with a lame back watching his teammates fatten up their batting averages.

In the first inning the Reds' pitcher, Avella, was forced to go to the showers, being replaced on the mound by the venerable Mike Kelly, but Kelly was also given a pasting and had to surrender the pitching duties to Third Baseman Marble in the seventh.

Volkman gave Jack Gertsberg a chance to show his stuff by having him relieve Sturtevant in the eighth inning and, although a bit wild due to inactivity, Gertsberg fanned four batters and allowed no hits.

TWO RECORDS Aim of Preps IN BASEBALL

With two victories and one defeat in the P. A. L. baseball race, the Jefferson High School Indians will be trying to break two league records when they meet the Burlingame preps at the peninsula diamond today.

First, pitcher Bill Strassburger will be trying for a no hit, no run game.

Secondly, the Indians will be trying to amass—a record-breaking total of hits and runs in a league game.

While the first depends on Strassburger himself, the Daly City preps have a good chance to get a bushel of hits providing sluggers Ed Owens, George and Paul Ragghianti and Harry Rose have a good day.

ANOTHER VICTORY

The Sport A. C. defeated the Coast-side A. C. 10 to 3 at Jefferson last Sunday. Bill Kelley pitched the whole game for the winners he also hit 2 for 2 Bob Jones got 3 for 3 and Sam Lucia got 2 for 4.

The Sport A. C. had to play the last 4 innings without their slugging right fielder, Fred (home run). Francesconi who took sick and had to retire. Gene Greene the first baseman for the winners got a smashed finger when a hot rounder bounced off it, in the seventh inning Kenny Heggen finishing the game at first base. This is the third straight win for the Sport A. C. who had a record last year of 9 straight losers. They are improving fast.

Straussburger Whiffs 17 Batters But Loses By 2-1 Score

After giving one of the finest exhibitions of high school baseball ever to be played in the P. A. L., the Jefferson High tossers lost out in the thirteenth inning of their game with the San Jose preps, 2-1, Friday.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Straussburger of Jefferson and Paul of San Jose throughout and the preps ended the ninth inning with the score tied at 1 up. Up to this time Straussburger had allowed the Joseans only three hits, while the Indians had collected five from Paul.

moved around to third on bunts. Then a hit by Arguella brought him in with the winning run.

In their half of the thirteenth, the Jefferson put two men on base when Petersen and Denning were hit by pitched balls. Arthur's bunt moved them around to second and third, and Paul started to walk George Ragghianti purposely. Petersen, expecting a bunt by Ragghianti, took too great a lead at third, and was picked off by a nice throw from Hiyaama, San Jose catcher. Owens failed to hit, ending the scoring chance.

PLAY LIKE VETERANS

The San Jose team was one of the classic prep nines ever to play on the local diamond, with shortstop Higadi, first-baseman Otis, and catcher Hiyaama particularly outstanding. However, Paul sent the ball over the plate with little more than his fingerprints on it, although the Indians got only six hits.

Strassburger had his pitch working with a two-foot drop, striking out 17 batters, and it was a tough one for him to lose. Petersen made some nice catches in left-field that might have gone for hits, while the two Ragghiantis and Owens looked good at bat for the Indians.

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, a pleasant, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a terrific rain storm. He makes himself at home. Six years ago his father had died in China, leaving the lad, Barry Gilbert, to fight his way back to the States. He did not recollect ever having had a mother. During the arrival of a butler, Willetts; a chauffeur, Evans; a cook and a maid. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. Barry pockets the Evans, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Montauk, intending to disappear there. On the way he assists Judge Hambridge and his daughter, Patricia, whose car had broken down. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Thursday. Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer. Mr. Ridder, Sr., through his newspaper, the Globe, accuses Judge Hambridge of taking orders from Tammany Hall in a condemnation proceeding.

On Wednesday—eighteen days after his advent at Southampton—the Duke got a letter from Mrs. Ridder.

"My Own Dear Boy: I write this as we are leaving Cheltenham, and shall try to post it at Southampton. How I wish it were our Southampton, and that I were about to see you. Your radio message arrived duly. I understood, of course, and it made me happier than I have been in years. Don't laugh, but I have been sleeping with it under my pillow. Think how long it has been since I have had any word from you, save for that hurried, worried talk at the hotel. I wanted to write you at once, but it has been hard to get a minute away from your father. He really is very ill, and a little irritable, and the doctor says any shock might prove serious. Of course, I want to tell him about you, but perhaps it's as well that I can't just yet. We shall be away until the end of July, at least, and perhaps longer. By that time, I shall have had such good news of you as will enable me to win him over. He does care for you, dear. As much as I do. Perhaps more, and that is why his pride has been hurt, and he has seemed so hard. I do hope you have given up drinking. That has been your real enemy. And I do hope you will find work. Nothing else will go so far in persuading him soon. He must change his will. It isn't the money I'm thinking of so much as his bitterness. I could bear your being 'cut off,' but I have begged him for years to take out the paragraph forbidding me to help you, and giving his reasons why. I shall never forget the night he read me that. He has taken care of the household expenses at Southampton. (Did I tell you that we were going to open the place, anyway? We've had Willetts ever since we've had the house, and our agreement is that his winter lay-off isn't to last over six months.) Your father gave him his check when he came to the hotel the morning we sailed, and will send him one every month, to pay servants, etc. I am enclosing another hundred dollars for you, Cash, because my bank account's rather low now. That's all, except that I am counting the days to your letter at Naumheim. It's perfectly safe to write me there, as I shall arrange with the porter. I want that letter, dear. You can never know how much I've wanted it, and how long, and how I pray that nothing may happen now. One false step on your part—one foolish exploit like that at college—if he knew, would end everything forever. And he would know. Ill as he is, he still has his newspaper sent him, and he still reads every word. If I seem over-anxious, you will understand. You are almost all I have. Mother. P. S. Don't fail to write."

For the first time since he had inserted his knife blade under the dry putty of that window, the Duke felt ashamed of himself. Deeply and thoroughly ashamed.

"What can I do?" he said. "I can't write. And what would be the use? One letter, and then silence. Some day, she's sure to find out that her boy never came near Southampton. . . . I wish to God I could find that boy!"

Thursday's evening paper was full of Judge Hambridge.

"Hambridge Decision Due," the headline read, "As Civic Association Links Holding Corporation with Boss Kelly." The link didn't seem very strong. Kelly, who evidently was some potatoes in Tammany hall, had once employed one of the "alleged dummy directors" of the corporation that owned the property to be used in widening Jefferson street. "In the face of this sensational disclosure," the paper asked editorially, "will Supreme Court Judge Hambridge have the courage to give these men the fabulous sums they ask for their rackets?" Judge Hambridge insists that he has never even met Mike Kelly. "I have never spoken a word to him in my life," Judge Hambridge's decision is long over due. When it is handed down, the city's voters will know whether Boss Kelly has ever spoken to Judge Hambridge.

After that, Barry wasn't surprised to find the Judge absent from the next night's dinner party at his house. Evidently, the pack was in full cry. Friday's evening paper had a headline that ran clear across the street. Still unfolded, Barry had left the paper lying on the library table, with Boss Kelly's name filling most of its visible quarter-page.

Naturally, Patricia was disturbed. "Father spoke at a banquet last night at the Astor," she explained. "And he wouldn't let me stay in with him. I'll sleep in the hotel, and take a train out in the morning," he said. An hour ago, he phoned that he'd been unavoidably detained.

"I fancy he didn't feel quite up to the trip," Peter Winslow added to Patricia's apology. "The speech must have taken it out of him, and then, afterward, he saw a woman killed by a taxi-cab."

"Oh—Peter!" "Yes, The Judge called me, early this morning, about his decision in this condemnation proceeding. He'd just sent it to the county clerk's office. And his voice sounded rather shaky. He'd gone for a walk after the dinner was over, he said, and the taxi dashed out of a side street, just as the woman stepped off the curb. The driver jammed on his brakes, and skidded right up onto the sidewalk. The usual hit-and-run business."

"What did the Judge talk about at the dinner?" Barry asked, chiefly to change the subject.

"I don't know. I haven't seen a paper today."

Winslow seemed preoccupied, Barry thought, but a mighty fine fellow. A famous criminal lawyer, but so simple and kindly. He was a big chap, loosely put together, and his graying hair was loosely brushed back from a face that was square in every sense. The two men clicked at once. Barry loved Peter's manner to his wife—a soft, round, pink little woman, with worried eyes. Peter was always jolly, gently, whimsically, protectively. "My yes-man," he said of her. "Anything I do is right."

"That's only my move to make the decision unanimous," smiled Mrs. Winslow. She had wit, in her own quiet way.

"I never met your father," the attorney remarked to Barry, in the drawing room, after dinner. "You work on his newspaper, I suppose."

"No."

"Don't you want to do anything?" he asked.

"Very much."

"What?"

"Anything."

"That won't get you far. Can you write?"

"Like the lady who was asked if she could play the piano, I don't know—I never tried."

"You should be able to write—with your father's gift of trenchant expression. You've got it, too, in conversation. My brother owns a big advertising agency. I'd like to have you meet him."

"I'd like to," said the Duke. "I do want to work." He hesitated. "I've been in town almost every day this week, looking for a job."

He caught Patricia's surprised glance.

"Come in and see me," Winslow suggested.

Just his damned luck! Here was a job—a career, probably—for the asking, and he couldn't take it. Not as

"There's a Lady to See You, Sir."

John Clarke Ridder, Jr. But Patricia's eyes were still on him, so "I'll be in Monday," he said.

When he had made his adieu to the Winslows, Patricia accompanied him to the door.

"I owe you an apology," she declared. "You're not just a rich man's son. You're something quite different. And I'm—glad!"

"Some girl!"

When he reached home, Willetts was waiting in the hall.

"There's a lady to see you, sir."

"At midnight?"

"She got here around eight o'clock. And she wouldn't go. She's upstairs, in the library."

"What kind of a lady?"

"Sort of glittery, if you ask me," the butler replied.

"Did she come in a car?"

"One of the station taxis, sir."

"How's she going to get back? Never mind! I can rouse Evans, if we need him. You go to bed."

Very much on guard, he climbed the stairs to the upper rooms.

Willetts was right; her eyes were "glittery." And hard. A woman who knew her way around, Barry would have said. And yet there was something tender about her, too. She had a sharp face, with a slightly protruding chin. Her lips and brows and lashes were heavily made-up, but her hair, nondescript in color, escaped in soft waves from beneath her cheap little red beret. She wore a shabby black dress, and her shoes were badly worn.

All this, Barry observed in the long moment before she spoke.

"You're not Mr. Ridder," she said. Her voice was hard, too. Like the girl, hard and yet pitiful. It seemed on the point of breaking.

"Yes," Barry answered. "I am."

"Not John Clarke Ridder. Not the old man."

The Duke breathed again.

"Not the old man, of course," he said. "My father's in Europe. I'm John Clarke Ridder, Jr."

The girl stared at him.

"You mean you're John Clarke Ridder's son?"

"Of course."

She kept on staring.

"Somebody's crazy," she said.

It had come, then. It was bound to come. Was Willetts listening in the hall? What would Patricia say?

"Somebody's crazy," the girl repeated, "and I don't think it's me. Or somebody's a liar, and I don't think it's him!"

And, suddenly, she began to laugh.

"No," she shrieked; "it's you! It's written all over your face! And it's funny, because you've walked into a pretty mess."

"I—?"

"If you're John Clarke Ridder, Jr., I'm your wife."

"My wife?"

She stopped laughing, as suddenly as she had begun.

"That's it," she said, and her voice was harder than ever. "I'm your wife, and you're under arrest for killing a guy!"

"Under arrest?" Barry echoed.

"What are you talking about?"

For answer, the girl reached across to the library table, and handed him the newspaper she had been reading when he came into the room.

"That's what John Clarke Ridder did—last night," she said. "Killed a guy. That guy. That damned skunk, Mike Kelly. Boss Kelly, of Tammany Hall!"

CHAPTER III

After all, she wasn't such a "glittery" lady.

For, as Barry glanced at the newspaper headlines unfolded before him, she crumpled suddenly, and dropped into the big chair.

"Steady!" the Duke admonished her. "Wait a minute; I'll get you a drink."

He poured the girl a stiff hooker of brandy, and she drank about a third of it. "Knew her way around," undoubtedly, he thought, and yet there was something helpless and appealing about her.

"Finish it."

"Thanks; I'm all right now."

To give her a chance to pull herself together, the Duke went back to those headlines. "Boss Kelly Murdered," they read. "Body Found by Servants. Skull Crushed. Midnight Caller Hunted by Police."

"Was your husband the midnight caller?" he asked.

The girl nodded, wearily.

"And he's John Clarke Ridder, Jr.?" She nodded again.

For some reason he never quite understood, the Duke had stopped wondering whether Willetts was listening outside. Instead he was thinking of a letter that lay in the drawer of the library table; a letter from a heart-hungry old woman, who had written to this boy, from three thousand miles away, "I am counting the days to your letter. You can never know how much I've wanted it, and how long, and how I pray that nothing may happen now."

Well, something had happened. Something that would end that old woman's efforts to make it up with the boy's father; something that might well be the end of them both.

"Why did your husband kill Boss Kelly?"

"He didn't."

"You said—"

"I said, 'That's what John Clarke Ridder did.' Well, that's what they say he did, and it isn't going to make much difference whether he did it or not."

"But you don't think he did it."

"I know he didn't. He had reason enough, and he's done a lot of crazy things, but Jack wouldn't hurt a fly."

"Why did you come out here?"

"For help."

"Well," the Duke said, "maybe I can help you. God knows, I'd like to. Anyway, let's see where we stand."

He crossed the room, and sat opposite her, on a little library chair.

"Go on," he urged. "What's your name?"

"What's yours? Your real name?"

"Barry Gilbert. I'm a bum. I took shelter in this house, one rainy night a couple of weeks ago, and everybody thought I was young Ridder, so I let 'em think so. That's my story. What's yours?"

She actually smiled.

"You've got your nerve," she observed. "Well, that's what we need now. My name's Peggy O'Day."

"Actorine?"

"Sort of. I was a chorus girl in 'Blossom Time' when I met Jack in Florida. He was a bum, too. Living under a fake name. We still live under that. Jay Rogers. Everybody calls him 'Jack.' The old man paid him fifty dollars a week for not using his name. We've got a little boy, now, and he doesn't even know his name's Ridder. He thinks he's Jay Rogers, Jr. The old man doesn't know what name we took, and he doesn't care."

Negligence

I have journeyed through the plains and mountain regions of many parts of this country, and always I have been impressed by the criminal carelessness of campers, hunters and motorists who, paying no heed to warnings posted up through all the country, throw lighted cigarettes and cigars into underbrush, leave burning camp fires behind them, or deliberately start fires just to see them burn.

A friend of mine, fifteen or twenty years ago, bought a ranch in southern Montana, with a forest filled with game, through which ran a beautiful mountain river.

One day a man and a woman drove past his place, and stopping asked him the way to a town fifty or sixty miles distant.

He took his own car to lead them to the right road, and when he left them he asked them not to start any fires, not even a cooking fire, for there had been a protracted drought, and dry tree limbs ignite easily.

Three hours after they left his place he saw a thin trail of smoke rising on the side hill across which ran the road they had taken.

In less than an hour after that the woods were alight. In a few days more, a vast tract of splendid forest had been destroyed, and rangers and volunteers were fighting one of the hottest blazes that had ever been seen in the country.

Down the mountain, struggling frantically to escape, came deer and bears and one or two cougars, but they were all stopped by the lake around which the fire had spread. Their charred bones were found afterward when the terrain was examined to learn just how far the flames had gone and how much timber land had been rendered worthless.

The total ran into millions of dollars. The government and local state administrations are obliged to hire thousands of men to keep a watch on state and national forests, which would be safe from harm were it not for the criminal practice of tourists of throwing away lighted matches into tinder-dry woods, or building camp fires and neglecting to put them out.

One of the glories of the western half of the country is its vast stretches of standing timber.

The foliage provides shade and potential lumber, for when trees are cared for scientifically replanting takes the place of those that are cut down.

Moreover their shade protects the hill sides and continues the water supply furnished by the small streams.

By the sweat of his brow man has eaten bread since the beginning of recorded time.

Fighting for Food Adam started about that time, but it was bread fruit, not bread, probably, which he ate. And he didn't stay in the Garden very long, anyway.

On my way to the coast of Maine last fall I had an opportunity to observe close at hand a number of phases of this bread hunt in which all of us engage, directly or indirectly.

The apple crop was just ripening in New England and among the hills. I saw many herds of milch cattle, animals which every night and morning must submit to the inconvenience of being milked, so that people far away may be awakened by the rattle of milk bottles on the back stoop, and realize that they must get up, bolt down breakfast and take a subway or elevated ride to the place where, at the end of every week or month they obtain the wherewithal to buy more bread—not to mention meat and vegetables.

Here in New England this continuous battle is a little harder. Root crops flourish, it is true, but though there are some limited grain fields there are no wide prairie stretches like those of the middle western states.

But if Maine lacks in wheat and rye and oats, she more than makes this up by her fisheries.

Crossing the plains from Minneapolis to Seattle one travels through the Dakotas, which supply the great national flour barrel. Man has followed the wheat as he has the fish. When I was a child in the northern part of Iowa, most of the farmers living in my vicinity planted and reaped wheat. Then it was discovered that the soil of the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota provided more and better crops, and the Iowa lads, always resourceful, began raising oats, some of which, when ground went into fancy packages and was sold for breakfast food, though the bulk was consumed by horses.

Meanwhile up in Montana the ranchers had taken to grazing which transformed the grass into beef and mutton. Most of which went east to enrich the dinner tables of men, women and children who did not know what a wheat field looked like.

Today as I write in a little place in Maine I can hear the "put put" of half a dozen lobster trappers, whose produce will soon be gracing the tables of people in New York.

The fight for food never slackens.

Printed Trimmings for Elegant Daytime Frock

Pattern No. 1851-B

The smartest of the new dresses are those in a single color with flashes of printed silk to trim them. This design is one of the best, made of blue cloxy silk and trimmed with a print in red and blue on a white ground. The front of the bodice has a row of buttons extending to the neckline and a collar of the printed silk. A slender, paneled skirt is split up the front to show a printed strip that is attached underneath. Three-quarter sleeves are gathered into fitted cuffs in harmony with the collar. And by all means don't overlook the novelty shoulder and hip yoke.

Indian Snake Charmer Uses a Mysterious Poison Herb

Kurbad Ali, an Indian, has a contract with a medical institute to supply them with cobras, the poison of which is used for experiments. To secure his victims he employs a mysterious herb used from time immemorial by Indian snake charmers. The herb exudes an odor which does not affect human beings, but temporarily stupefies snakes, rendering them harmless.

EFFECT OF CARBON

Carbon deposits cause piston rings to lose their elasticity and if allowed to accumulate may eventually result in sticking and binding of the rings. When this occurs the result is excessive friction or loss of compression. Removal of carbon and examination of pistons and rings should be left to a skilled mechanic.

"Of course it feels different, Dad.. it is different!"

IT took more than just good performance to win over 2,500,000 Ford V-8 fans in less than four years. It's an entirely different kind of performance that did it!

It's the V-8 engine, first and foremost. The smoother flow of its 85 horsepower. Its pick-up in traffic. Its effortless pull in the open and on hills. For you can't expect any less modern engine to feel like a V-8.

Then there's riding comfort—on a springbase of 129"—almost a foot longer than wheelbase. There's the way a Ford "keeps its feet" on turns and rough roads—thanks to a type of chassis not found anywhere else in the world.

Why not try these advantages for yourself today? Before you decide on any new car—get the "V-8 feel" that put the Ford first in sales among all cars last year.
